FIRE SWEEPS BIG CARNIVAL IN MANILA; 16 PERSONS HURT

Throng Of Merry-Makers Panic-Striken; Loss Is Million Pesos

FESTIVAL GOES ON

Casualties Come When Thousands Crowd The Narrow Exits

MANY AUTOS LOST

Favorable Wind Saves Residential District Of Ermita

(CHINA PRESS OWN SERVICE)

Manila, February 6.—Sixteen persons were injured and over 1,000,000 pesos worth of property was destroyed last night and early this morning when fire swept the Philippine Carnival City. It was believed late last night that there were no deaths but today it is confirmed that one person is missing.

The Auto Palace, where hundreds of passenger cars and motor trucks were on exhibition, is almost a total loss and was not insured and half the Carnival City, including exhibits from every province in the Philippine Islands, was destroyed.

The auditorium and open air ball room and part of the industrial exhibit were saved and it was decided today that the Carnival will continue its program.

The fire started at 6 o'clock in the evening while thousands of people crowded the grounds, the various sideshows, the exhibits, and the Auto Palace.

Crowd Panic Stricken Rushes For Narrow Exits

The crowd was thrown into a panic and for some time it was believed that a death toll would follow the rush for the narrow gates in the high bamboo fence surrounding the Carnival Grounds.

Narrow exits to Calle Bagumbayan, Calle San Luis and the Luneta made it impossible for the thousands to get to the streets quickly and it was in the rush for the gates that the sixteen persons were injured.

Aided by a southeast wind, the factor that saved the Ermita District, with its valuable residential section, the flames swept rapidly through the temporary structures of bamboo and matting and the firemen were greatly handicapped although apparatus was on duty inside the Carnival Grounds. Two combination engines which are maintained on duty inside the grounds while the Carnival is building and during the week's fiesta, were quick to fight the fire but the wind and the flimsy material of the Carnival buildings made the task almost hopeless.

Favorable Wind Saves Ermita Resident District

Evidently originating in one of the provincial exhibits on the South or Calle San Luis side, the fire traveled quickly to the east and north, towards the Nozaleda baseball park and Wallace Field. The wind prevented its spread across the narrow Calle San Luis to the residential district of Ermita. Firemen centered their efforts on saving the auditorium, with its magnificent open air ballroom where 1,000 couples dance nightly during the nine-day Carnival; and the industrial exhibit, with products and manufactured articles from all over the Islands.

This morning 300 soldiers are aiding in the rebuilding of the high white bamboo wall which encloses the city of alabaster and in repairing a score of damaged buildings which housed amusement attractions and exhibits.

The fire came on the fifth night of the greatest Carnival in Manila history. It followed four nights marked by record attendance figures. The Victory Carnival opened its gates Saturday night.

For eleven seasons Manila has been the playground of the Far East at Carnival time. There has been but one lapse. In 1918, when preparations were made for the 1919 Carnival, the United States was at war with Germany. For patriotic reasons and to enable the Philippines to unite in placing every resource at the disposal of the American Government and the organisations active in war work, the Carnival was abandoned.

Victory Carnival Was Celebrating Allied Success

This year the Mardi Gras of the Orient was to celebrate the Allied victory.

Its modern city of alabaster surpassed its predecessors in size

Arrogance Of Japanese In Disregarding Chinese Laws Shown At Tsinanfu

Invade Settlement Set Aside For Foreign Residents On Condition That They Do Not Engage In Manufacturing And Promptly Start Factories, Ignoring Protests Of Shantungese: Acquire Land By Intimidating Chinese Property Holders

By JOSEPH TIMMONS
(Universal Service)

TSINGTAO is not the only spot in Shantung where the Japanese are fortifying their future by acquisition of land.

Neither is Po-shan, the town that is being swallowed whole.

When the final casting up of accounts is made, after "sovereignty" has been restored to China or has not been, even in pretense, it will be found that Japanese have acquired most of the best located land of the "settlement" at Tsinanfu.

This "settlement" was voluntarily set aside by China some years ago as a quarter in which foreigners might do commercial business, but it was definitely specified that they must not engage in any manufacturing business on lands acquired in this site. The settlement was made a "treaty port" by China.

Just now the Japanese are starting the foundations on a cotton mill, a flour mill and a match factory. The Shantungese are protesting. The provincial assembly has protested. But the Japanese go right on.

At Tsinanfu is located a big Chinese match factory. In order to encourage this industry the Chinese government gave it a monopoly in the district. It is a fine example of the new industrial impetus that has seized China and all leaders who regard factory development as important to the regeneration of China are proud of this particular factory. Hence their indignation is hot at the arrogance of the Japanese, who not only disregard the restrictions placed on the "settlement" by China but also ignore the law by which China seeks to encourage industry.

Steadily Encroach And Acquire Land

The "settlement" is west of the city, starting just beyond the outer wall of Tsinanfu. It is about a mile long and half a mile wide and lies south of the Shantung railway tracks and terminal lands, which extend east and west between these tracks and the tracks of the Chinese line, the Tientsin-Pukow railway. So the land lying along the south side of the Shantung railway tracks commands the situation there. Upon it will be the godowns, or warehouses, and the big wholesale establishments of the future. Also the factories, if the Japanese have their way. The farther removed from this front a piece of land is, the less is its value.

In the last few years land values in the "settlement" have increased ten times over. Lots that were worth $600 have sold as high as $6,500. The club of the Americans and British has its clubhouse on a lot that it bought before the war for $250. That lot is worth $14,000 now.

This leap of land values upward is due entirely to the eagerness of the Japanese to get a corner on the best sites. They have acquired nearly all of the land along the railway, and most of it on the next three streets.

Japanese soldiers are marched by companies through the streets of the "settlement" at the will of their commanders. This settlement is not like others; it is administered by the Chinese. Japanese soldiers in formation, under arms, have no right there. In the days to come, if the Japanese are permitted to keep Tsingtao and the railway and they choose to establish barracks and forts in the "settlement" and to enlarge thus their accommodations for soldiers so that they may maintain an enormous garrison at Tsinanfu, who will say them nay? Certainly the Chinese will not be able to prevent the further aggression and the darker menace preparing for Peking.

In lesser degree the same process is going on, of land acquisition and steady encroachment, with utter disregard to Chinese laws and rights, at Chou-tsun, fifty-seven miles east of Tsinanfu, where there is also a "settlement" which China opened in 1906. Chou-tsun has about 30,000 inhabitants.

Employing Po-shan Methods Again

Likewise the process is on, with more eagerness, at Weihsien, 134 miles east of Tsinanfu, also with its foreign settlement, an enormous one with 3,840 acres which offers excellent opportunity for the Japanese to gain a big and secure foothold cheap. Weihsien is one of the most important cities between the port and Tsinanfu. Larger than it but somewhat less important commercially is Ching-chow-fu, some thirty miles west of Weihsien. It has no settlement, but the Japanese are getting land just the same, employing the methods that prevail at Po-shan.

Chin-ling-chen, seventy-five miles east of Tsinanfu, lies ten miles north of the railway. It is the iron mine town, and the Japanese have succeeded to the German concession mine. The Germans had secured a concession to build a light railway to it, and the Japanese have constructed a standard gauge road without taking the trouble to ask for a modification of the concession. It is known that they are shipping out considerable quantities of ore to Japan, but I have not been able to find any one who knows how much.

Coal the Japanese are getting from the Po-shan, Tzechwan and Hung-shan district, sixty-five to seventy miles east of Tsinanfu, where there are some eighty mines, and in smaller quantity from Fangtze, on a branch line twenty-five miles south of Weihsien.

Under German operation the Fangtze mines yielded about a thousand tons of coal a day, but the seams are not extensive.

The largest of the former German mines at Tzechwan produced under German operation, with Chinese labor of course, 2,000 tons per day. Three thousand Chinese coolies were employed. Half the number were employed in the small Chinese mines, producing probably a thousand tons more per day.

I doubt if either the coal or iron deposits lying along the Shantung railway are rich enough to be very important, but probably the mineral resources of the entire province are great.

In 1916-17 Japan profited enormously by import of copper from Shantung. No copper is mined in Shantung, but Japan secured in that period 60,000 tons of the metal so much needed in the manufacture of war munitions. Of course she reaped a rich harvest when she had used this copper up in the making of shells and had sold the shells to her allies.

Chinese Afraid Not To Sell

The copper she used was the copper coins of Shantung, about all there were in the province. To melt down or ship out these coins was in violation of the Chinese law, but Japan stripped the province of coppers.

Near Tsingtao, both inside and outside the leased territory, I am informed, the Japanese have been buying land of the Chinese farmers

BERLIN ENVOY RETURNS WAR FELONS' LIST; QUITS PARIS

Rejects Allies Roll Of Criminals And Hands His Resignation

EXPLAINS REASON

Got No Satisfaction On His 23 Objections To Treaty Application

French Premier Summons Other Ambassadors To Discuss Action

(French Wireless Service)

Paris, February 5.—The list of war criminals together with a covering note was handed to Baron von Lersner, German Charge d'Affaires ad interim, at 9 o'clock on Monday evening.

Baron von Lersner promptly returned both the list and the letter to M. Millerand. At the same time he sent a letter to M. Millerand as President of the Ambassador's Conference stating that he had made a number of "demarches," the precise number specified being 23 to discountenance the application of article 228 of the Versailles Treaty and that failing to receive satisfaction he was not prepared to take cognisance of the Allied note.

Baron von Lersner added that he was resigning his post, being desirous of leaving Paris the same evening. M. Millerand at once summoned the Ambassador's Conference which held two meetings on Tuesday, one in the morning and one at 6 p.m. The Conference reached a decision which it was decided to communicate to Berlin direct.

The incident has created a sensation in the French press. The Petit Parisien states that Dr. Mayer, German Charge d'Affaires, may return to Paris from Berlin today, Thursday.

Allies Resolved Germans Must Fulfill Obligations

(French Wireless Service)

Paris, February 5.—The Premier, M. Millerand, appeared before the Foreign Affairs Commission of the Chamber yesterday afternoon to make a statement on the foreign situation in general and in particular on the policy of France with regard to Russia and on Germany's execution of the various clauses of the Versailles treaty.

Examining the articles of the treaty seriatim, M. Millerand showed that the Allies held in the actual text of the instrument the necessary weapons to assure the execution of the treaty.

He added that the French Government was firmly resolved to compel Germany to fulfill all her undertakings. Turning to the question of Russia, the Premier declared that he would continue M. Clemenceau's policy, adding that this attitude was in conformity with the decisions reached in full accord with the Allies in November last.

If the nations bordering upon Russia, whose independence had recently been recognised, were attacked by the Soviet, M. Millerand asserted, the Allies would lend them assistance. The Allies had already kept their promise in sending arms and material to the Poles.

M. Millerand will make a further statement before the Commission next Tuesday, when he will deal with Eastern policy.

Harbin, February 5.—According to a report from Chita General Kappel's troops including the remainder of Generals Voizchekovsky's, Volkoff's and Krasilnikoff's armies have captured Irkutsk, whence all the representatives of the Soviet are said to have fled to the woods.

According to later messages General Kappel also captured the gold supply. The fate of Admiral Kolchak is not known. Apparently he was not found at Irkutsk.

It is added that General Kappel has got into contact with Ataman Semenoff. The attitude of the Czechs towards these events is not known. According to some reports they adopted a neutral role, while others say that they assisted General Kappel.

JAP DRUG AGENT KILLED BY CHINESE

Stories Of Morphine Peddler's Murder In Chihli Are Conflicting

(China Press Correspondence)

Paotingfu, Chihli, February 3.—Reports have reached here of the killing of a Japanese morphia agent by Chinese at Shih-chia-chuang several days ago. Shih-chia-chuang is the junction point of the Peking-Hankow and the Shansi-Railways. It is claimed that the Japanese, whose name was not ascertained, has been acting as distributing agent at that point for the drug.

Stories of the murder are conflicting. One is that he was the victim of his Chinese servant who wanted to get away with the money the man had accumulated. Another is that a crowd of ruffians were after the money and, when the Japanese tried to use his revolver in defense, they despatched him with knives.

A third is that the root of the trouble was a quarrel with the proprietor of a house of ill-fame who stocked his morphine. All agree that he was stabbed to death, that he had a revolver that he attempted to use, and that he was protected by no passport. He had no small quantity of morphia in his room when he met his fate.

It is known that two Japanese from the Peking Legation have been down to investigate the crime but the substance of their report is not known here.

Show Friendship Six Days After Fighting Is Stopped

BY FRAZIER HUNT
(Special Cable by Courtesy of Chicago Tribune)

Mr. Frazier Hunt, now in Siberia for the Chicago Tribune, is author of the "Yaphank Benny" series of stories and one of the best known war correspondents in America or Europe. As correspondent for the Chicago Tribune overseas during the world war he won lasting recognition, bringing a remarkable service to a close when he returned to America with a copy of the peace treaty in time to permit his newspaper to publish it to the world for the first time and even before it had been given to the American Senate by the American Government. In his present sojourn in Siberia Mr. Hunt is telling you the kind of person the Siberian peasant really is, and he is making you familiar with just what the peasant is fighting for, his ideals and his aims.

With Partisan Forces in Siberian Hills, January 17, by messenger to Vladivostok.

This morning I came by peasant sled into this tiny frozen village in snow blanketed hills 75 miles from Vladivostok. It is the stronghold of partisan forces whom the few remaining Kolchak officers love to call Bolsheviki slips. In front of my sled rode four boy soldiers on farm horses while four more galloped in the rear. Anyone of them would gladly have died before they would let the least harm befall me yet they were boys whom people in Vladivostok said would either kill me or hold me for ransom. Soon one of them will take this message back through the Kolchak lines and he will not be afraid. "You might be killed" I told him. He smiled and shrugged his shoulders, "Nitchevo" he answered. "It does not matter. I would die fighting for my ideal." This is the spirit of these farmer lads fighting here in snow thirty degrees below zero.

Foreign Intervention Unites Russian Forces

They are fighting things they have believed to be wrong from the day they were born—reactionary ideas, official graft, cruelties, for land, for the franchise and a voice in affairs; they are fighting for things they and their fathers have always been dreaming of—land, peace and freedom. These are the only things these peasants in the hills are fighting for, and they are the same things which all Russians, one hundred and fifty million other peasants, are also fighting for. Foreign intervention which has been backing the Kolchaks, Denikins, and Judenitch has only served to bring them together and to unite them under the common cause. If Japan decides to remain all Russia will fight her. Already Kolchak generals are conferring secretly with the chiefs of these hill partisan detachments on the policy of fighting what they consider the common enmy. "Let foreigners leave us alone and we will settle our own affairs in thirty days," one bearded peasant chief told me and he is right.

By some miracle of sentiment there has no resentment against American interference now that we are withdrawing, and it is to America that these million peasants are looking hopefully. There were days six months ago when we were fighting them, and American troops guarding railroad sectors made possible the continuance of Kolchak's hated government. But Siberians instinctively know that America will help them, at least economically, when she understands their side. They have seen American soldiers grow to sympathise deeply with them and they know that the hearts of these American boys here is the heart of America.

MURDER FOLLOWS JAP ANTAGONISM TO U.S. VESSELS

Yokohama Lighterage Boycott Of Shipping Board Leads To New Trouble

AMERICAN'S LIFE SOUGHT

Thugs Board Steamer And Assault Mate—Consul Demands Protection

Tokio, February 1.—What started as a boycott against the American Shipping Board vessels being operated by the Admiral Line by certain of the lighter men of Yokohama last week ended in a murder yesterday, preceded by the descent of a gang of thugs upon the s.s. Lake Gitano, the crushing of an independent lighter, the cutting adrift of a number of other independent lighters, the serious beating up of one of the American mates of the vessel and a nasty assault with intent to kill upon Mr. John M. Laffin, manager of the American lighterage firm of the Pacific Stevedoring and Landing Company, says the Japan Advertiser of today. The man murdered was one of Mr. Tomoye's employes, a Japanese, who was visited at his home by armed thugs and put to death, evidently for refusing to join in the boycott.

Immediately following this outbreak of lawlessness, Captain Johnson of the Lake Gitano called upon Consul-General Scidmore, of the American Consulate-General, who thereupon issued a demand upon the Japanese authorities for adequate police protection for the American shipping and for the Japanese employed in lightering and discharging the American cargoes.

Yesterday afternoon, representatives of the Admiral Line and of Struthers and Dixon presented the facts of the case before Ambassador Morris, who is taking appropriate action.

BREWING FOR SOME TIME

The affair has been brewing for some time, especially since on one day recently there were seven Admiral Line ships in the Yokohama harbor at one time and the amount of the lighterage business to be done was easily apparent. In anticipation of the greatly increased business coming through the increasing number of United States Shipping Board vessels on the Japanese run, an independent lighterage company, known as the Pacific Stevedoring and Landing Company, was organised by Yokohama Americans, with American capital, and to this new firm has been going a great bulk of the American business. This has far from pleased the older-lighterage companies, amalgamated into the Lightermen's Guild, with the result that there has been increasing friction. The Pacific Stevedoring Company has been using guild lighters, under charter, and of late these have been held back from their work on various pretexts, according to a spokesman for the Admiral Line, or, after tying up alongside of vessels to be discharged, would be towed away before fully loaded and scattered with their freight contents all over the harbor.

Attempts to secure better treatment went on during the greater part of last week and various promises of better service were given, only to be unfulfilled. Some of the so-called "higher-ups" of the guild interviewed the Admiral Line and Struthers and Dixon managements, notifying them that if the lighterage business were to be given to firms they named the trouble would cease.

MR. LAFFIN'S STORY

Mr. J. M. Laffin on Friday came to Tokio and chartered a number of independent lighters to work the s.s. Lake Gitano and these were alongside the ship yesterday morning. What happened is told, as follows, by Mr. Laffin, in a statement to The Japan Advertiser:

"On Friday we were able to work at discharging the Lake Gitano without interference, but

Capital Virtually Under Martial Law—More Soldiers Arrive

BY NATHANIEL PEFFER
(Staff Wire To THE CHINA PRESS)

Peking, February 6.—Students of all the larger Peking schools were virtually held prisoners all day today with troops forming cordons about the school grounds. Soldiers prevented the students leaving in groups for the mass meeting which was to be held at the Tienanmen.

Heavy guards were maintained in the Chienmen District this morning to prevent any gathering. The Government is considering the closing of all schools.

Forty students arrested Wednesday are still held and they are denied communication with the outside world. The troops have prohibited anyone communicating with them.

Students of Peking schools will ask the support of students throughout the country.

With troops scattered all over the city, Peking virtually under martial law, and more soldiers arriving from Nanyuan, the atmosphere here is tense.

Police And Soldiers Assault Lecturers

BY NATHANIEL PEFFER
(Staff Wire To THE CHINA PRESS)

Peking, February 5.—The Peking government is taking strong steps to check the students' movement. There were no demonstrations today, but thousands of students were out, lecturing in groups throughout the city. The police and the troops are under orders to break up these small gatherings.

The lecturers were stopped time after time. Their banners were torn and in some instances the speakers were beaten. Student leaders claim that many of them have been seriously hurt.

A military camp has been established inside the imperial city near Tienanmen, where students held their meeting Wednesday night, thus preventing further gatherings today.

A meeting of delegates of the student bodies at the Government university scheduled to take place early this evening has been called off as the result of a notice sent by the Ministry of Education to the university authorities. The Minister threatened to send 500 troops to the campus if the meeting is held.

A big mass meeting has been planned for Friday noon at the Tienanmen, but it is doubtful if it can be held, because of the many army tents located there. Similar camps have been established in other parts of the city.

Pressure On Merchants To Discontinue Support

Pressure is being brought upon the merchants to prevent them from continuing their support of the students' movement. The meeting of the Chamber of Commerce originally called for today to discuss the situation and prepare the next demonstration was called off for this reason.

According to statements made by student leaders, the Government is resorting to severe repression at the instigation of the Japanese in Peking. It is reported that Wednesday, while hundreds of students were imprisoned at Tienanmen, high government officials, including at least one minister, attended a meeting at the home of Mr. Okura, the Japanese financier, where

Saturday morning at 7 o'clock, when I went aboard the ship with six Japanese, a tug belonging to the Lightermen's Guild came out, towing a number of our barges, some of which were half filled from the day previous. They did not come alongside and one of our tugs drew up to them and, after a conversation which I did not hear, but presume was an agreement to tow the lighters back to the hatoba, our tug took the lighters in tow and attempted to bring them alongside the ship.

"The Lightermen's tug then ran between the lights and the ship and prevented this, while those on board attacked the men on our tug.

"Their launch drifted alongside the Lake Gitano and a mob of ruffians, probably 50 in number, boarded the steamer, armed with clubs and knives.

"One of our men, standing near where they were coming aboard, was attacked without warning and badly beaten. I was standing on the after hatch cover talking to the second mate when one of the thugs came up behind me and struck me a blow with a club. The mate called to me and I turned, just in time to escape another who was preparing to slash me with a knife. They managed to get several lusty blows on my head which stunned me, and then turned their attention to the officer, assaulting him with clubs and knives, leaving him bleeding and unconscious on the deck.

ORDERED OFF WORK

"During the row the thugs refused to allow our coolies to come aboard, but when they had disposed of us, they ordered them aboard, made them open the hatches and swing the booms out. They then told them to knock off work."

After driving the men on board from work, the gang of thugs came ashore and proceeded to the home of Tomoye, who furnishes lighters for Mr. Laffin. They wrecked the building and killed one of his employees.

Mr. T. M. Laffin said, in regards to the events of yesterday, that the trouble was of long standing and the result of jealousy, on the part of the Lightermen's Guild, to European competitors.

Mr. Laffin said:

"I and others started a stevedoring and landing company to handle the work of Struthers and Dixon and the Admiral Line. This work was given to us after we had been approached on two different occasions by Mr. Holsheiser, agent of these companies. I refused to attempt it at first, but accepted his proposition after a second conference, and work went on very nicely until another Yokohama firm, a member of the Guild which had previously been doing this work, made a complaint to the Guild about losing the business. Then the trouble started.

TOWED LIGHTERS AWAY

"On January 24 we were working four ships in the harbor when tugs from the Lightermen's Guild came alongside our lighters, some of which were half filled, and towed them away. We were notified that the Guild was holding a meeting and I was requested to attend. Nothing was settled and the following day another meeting was held, which was attended by Mr. Hazeltine, my son and myself. At this meeting the Lightermen's Guild demanded that my office be closed entirely, the Struthers and Dixon work be given to Helm Brothers and that of the Admiral Line to Mr. Owston.

"After making this proposition, Mr. Hazeltine was called into another room and informed that Helm Brothers had agreed to pay Y.10,000 to help defray the expenses of the boycott and that a like amount was expected from Mr. Owston for the same purpose. Mr. Hazeltine naturally refused to comply with this. I found out later that Helm Brothers know nothing of the matter.

"At a later meeting I was given a document, written in Japanese, and told that if I would sign it and return it to the Guild the matter would end. I refused to sign it until my lawyer could make a translation. This proved later to be an agreement to turn my business over to the Lightermen's Guild.

"When this failed, still another meeting was held in which the Guild proposed that a new company be formed and my firm get a certain percentage of the stock in the new company, the exact percentage to be agreed upon at a later meeting."

NOT FAULT OF MEN

Mr. Laffin added that the action of the Lightermen's Guild during the past few day has been disgraceful and that the sooner that the foreign shipping men of Yokohama take a hand in the matter the better it will be for all concerned. The lightermen themselves are not to blame, as they all seem to be willing and anxious to return to their work.

When seen by The Japan Advertiser yesterday morning, Mr. Helm said that his firm was a member of the Lightermen's Guild and that the rules of the Guild required a report to be made in case of loss of business. Mr. Helm said that his firm had lost some business and that it had been duly reported to the Guild, but he did not care to state what business had been lost. Mr. Helm added that he had no further knowledge of the action taken by the Guild and that the matter was entirely in their hands at the present time.

'Peau Neuve'

Scoring even a greater success than they did at the first performance last Saturday night, the Cercle Sportif Francais amateurs gave another delightful performance of 'Peau Neuve' at the French Club last night.

Mr. Schlisler, as Jaques Prevost, a splendid comedy role; Mr. Meynard, as Francois Villiers, and Mme. Meynard, as Germaine Villiers, again carried their parts remarkably well and they, as well as the other members of the excellent cast, were heartily applauded.

To Mr. F. Roy, the stage manager, and Mr. R. T. Peyton Griffin, who painted the scenery, much of the success of "Peau Neuve," is due.

Over 150 people, including many officers and men in uniform, saw last night's performance.

Broker Is Fined $100 As Firebug

Yih Kyik-tsz, a broker was fined $100 yesterday in the Mixed Court after he had been found guilty of incendiarism. He was accused of setting fire to a building at 130 Chapoo Road, in a thickly populated district. British Assessor Blackburn and Magistrate Loh heard the case.

Siberian Forces In Huge Numbers Fight For Peace

without interfering and without touching the railroad sectors that we still guard. It is a big thing to ask them during these frozen days, when their cavalry patrols can swoop down on the railroad and destroy tunnels, burn bridges and then gallop back to their hills with the full assurance that none dares to pursue them through the snow. These villages are behind them to the youngest boys for they are only peasant soldiers fighting their battles and dying for their magic words of peace, land and freedom.

Yesterday one old peasant lady pointed to a seventeen year old boy with a pitiful old rifle swung over his shoulder and proudly whispered to me: "He is my son, he is fighting for me." That is the spirit of these peasants. In scattered detachments varying in size from one hundred to several thousand they have been carrying on guerilla warfare against Kolchak since the days almost a year ago, when the Omsk government showed that it was undemocratic and reactionary. Peasants in Siberian hills supported them, hid them and fed them and believed in them. In summer, when the punitive expeditions swept up valleys punishing natives, burning villages the days were dark, but now with winter on their side and Kolchak broken, and their own forces increased by thousands of desertions they have fresh hopes. In Eastern Siberia they number fully one hundred thousand soldiers, and they are all working in close harmony with the city revolutionists. Were it not for the foreign boys they would control Siberia in ten days.

Magic Word 'Soviet' Is Driving Them On

Today the word Soviet is the magic word that is driving them on. I have asked hundreds of them what Soviet means to them and they have always answered land and freedom. The words constitutional assembly that for a year was a magic phrase keeping the peasants fighting bolshevism is gone. Now the word Soviet is taking its place. There is no question they will make peace with Moscow when foreign intervention ends, but these Siberian farmers with their one hundred million peasant brothers in European Russia will sweep away the ultra radicals and rule the whole country. They are 85 percent of the population and with peace Russia will become a peasant republic. If Lenin tries to cross them they will pull him down, just as they pulled Kolchak down.

Years ago after a five hundred mile trip through North European Russian forests, I wrote that these peasants would rule. I repeat it again that no force in Russia compares with their brute numbers. Nothing in the whole world is strong enough to check them. They are tired to death of war, revolution and they want peace, land and freedom. Soviet means all these to them. They know nothing about state socialism, scientific communism or any political philosophy, they only want to be left alone, to run their own affairs, to have their proper voice in the government and get land. Any and all of them will die for these.

Bitter Against Japan But Fight For Peace

Today they are bitter against Japan but whether Japan withdraws peacefully or whether they must fight they will keep going until they win.

Allied intervention has been worth ten Red army corps to Moscow. Only through it was the flame lighted that is now burning in all Russians' hearts. Even in these frozen hills it has set fire to these simple peasants. They will fight on until they get peace, and then with their great majorities they will rule Russia. Lenin and Trotsky will either have to step aside gracefully or they will pull them down. The world quaking with fear before the word Soviet would sleep peacefully tonight if they could hear these hill farmers explain what Soviet means to them. These farmers are 85 percent of all Russia.

EIGHTEEN ARE ARRESTED IN WAR ON OPIUM

Daily Raids Are Being Made By Police In Fight Against Traffic

THREE PLACES INVADED

Quantities Of Drug Found Are Confiscated By Mixed Court

War has been declared by the Settlement police on the opium traffic and gambling. Raids are being made daily and scores of law violators have already been taken.

Yesterday's contribution to the cause consisted of 18 prisoners, taken in three raids, and the fixing of penalties ranging from $3 to $50. Two of the cases were heard in the Mixed Court before British Assessor Blackburn and Magistrate Loh and the other before British Assessor Grant Jones and Magistrate Li.

Gambling was the charge made in the case before Messrs. Grant Jones and Li, it being explained by the police that although a quantity of opium and smoking paraphernalia was taken in the raid none of the defendants was caught in the act of using the drug. This raid was made by the Louza police at 206 Yunnan Road. Ten men were caught gambling and were fined $50 each with the alternative of spending a month in prison. The opium and pipes were confiscated.

Six persons were taken in a raid made by the West Hongkew police. A woman arrested in this raid was fined $30 and one man was fined $10, the other four, smokers, being let off with $3 each.

Two hawkers were taken in a raid by the Yangtszepoo police at 112 Miller Road, where opium was found. One of the men was fined $20 and the other was cautioned and released.

Smiles from the Mixed Court

Friday being fish day, Waung Bookau, a warder at the reformatory, prepared on Thursday evening for the event. He bought a fish and hooking a finger through its gill, swung merrily down Seward Road, his mouth watering at the anticipated pleasure of the morrow when with delicate sauces and browned to a turn the plump, finny denizen of the Whangpoo should grace his table.

Zuh Ah-sian, Aung Ting-sung and Tung Ah-ping, being painters by profession, were out to decorate the Settlement with bright crimson. They spied Waung.

"Ah-ha," they cried in unison, "A Japanese poor-fish."

Whereupon they accosted Waung and advised him to carry out his part of the boycott by hurling his prospective dinner into the river.

"No can do," protested the outraged warder. "This is a perfectly proper No. 1 Chinese fish. No can do."

A Chinese copper interfered before the riot had gained any considerable proportions and started to the Hongkew station with the quartette.

Then Waung ran into a lot more trouble, or, rather, a lot more trouble ran into Waung.

Waung Ah-sung, namesake of but no relation to the warder, is a coolie employed with the three painters. He saw his friends on their way to prison and hurled himself on the unsuspecting warder from the rear. It must have been some hurl, too, for Waung went to the hospital.

"But I didn't attack him," protested the coolie. "I was running to tell my employer about the arrest of my friends. He pursued me and collided with a telephone pole."

British Assessor Blackburn and Magistrate Loh were on the bench in Mixed Court. Mr. Lemiere appeared for the defense. Said the Assessor:

"Mr. Lemiere, we do not believe one word of your clients' stories; they will be fined $10 each."

But Waung had to buy another fish; the first one was utterly ruined before the warder had even started for the hospital.

13,000 Iron Workers In Government Plant In Japan Go On Strike

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, February 5.—Thirteen thousand workmen employed at the Government iron works at Yawata in Kyushu have struck without warning and put out the furnaces. The men are making a demonstration today.

Yawata, Kyushu, February 5.—About one thousand workers at the Government iron works here made a demonstration today while their representatives interviewed officials to whom they presented demands for shorter hours and increased pay.

Strong forces of police and gendarmerie were called out to preserve order but no acts of violence have occurred. The entire works is at a standstill, over 7,000 men being thrown idle.

The Yawata iron works is the largest of its kind in Japan. Where 500 factory chimneys used to blacken the sky there is now no sign of activity. The great furnaces are reported to be cooling down.

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is particularly a preparation for Infants and Children made agreeable to the taste, acceptable to the stomach and pleasant in its action. It has been in use for over thirty years and has always been one of the most highly esteemed of all cathartic preparations. It has one great advantage over other preparations of its kind in that while it opens the organs readily and completely, it does not have a tendency to produce subsequent constipation so much to be dreaded.

It was only after years of research in the fields of herbs and roots for a combination of purely vegetable matter that would have all the virtues of Castor Oil, without its disagreeable, nauseating properties, especially when used for infants or children, that the formula used in Fletcher's Castoria was found, and which for over 30 years has proven its worth. Try it.

Save the Babies.

Infantry mortality is something frightful. We can hardly realise that of all the children born in civilised countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one quarter die before they reach one year, thirty-seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen! We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save many of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestion, sickness, death. To avoid any possibility of giving your child opiates, or narcotics of any kind, keep Fletcher's Castoria in the house, and Save the Babies.

British Medical Missions Will Appeal To Commercial Interests Of China For Aid

Dr. R. Fletcher Moorshead Of London, Who Has Been Touring Country, And Other Speakers Tell Of Needs Immediate And Serious

As one phase of an effort that is to be launched to obtain funds for British medical missions in China an appeal is to be directed to British commercial interests, according to plans outlined yesterday at a meeting in the lecture hall of the Royal Asiatic Society. Sir Everard Fraser, British Consul-General, presided at the meeting and three speakers who were heard were: Dr. R. Fletcher Moorshead, secretary of the Baptist Mission in England, who has been touring China for the past half year, Dr. Duncan Main of the mission hospital and medical school of Hangchow, and Dr. D. C. Davenport of the Shantung Road Hospital of Shanghai.

It was pointed out by the speakers that besides the loss in recent years of active workers in medical mission work who were called into military service by the war, the high rate of exchange has been a factor that had worked disastrously in reducing funds available for mission work in China. That British medical missions in China are now facing needs that are acute and immediate was emphasised by Doctor Moorshead, who was the first speaker.

Doctor Moorshead explained that he had come to China to visit medical missions as a member of a body that was appointed in 1916 by a conference of British missionary societies to seek to co-ordinate work being done by all medical missions.

He said that what he had seen in the far interior and in many places impressed him with the paramount need of the work being done by medical missions. Wherever one went, he said, one encountered suffering humanity in need of help and he spoke of the success that is attending the efforts of British medical missions.

TELLS OF NEEDS

The speaker said that today there are 100 British medical missions in China, 32 men doctors, 44 women doctors, 99 hospitals with 5,712 beds and he told of the vast work being accomplished by these, commenting on the high standard of medical proficiency he had found in these medical missions and the enthusiasm of the workers.

"Wherever a British hospital is to be found," he said, "a favorable contact is established between the foreigner and the Chinese," and he added that the hospitals, in awakening the interest of influential Chinese, not only were opening the way for Christian religion but also for commerce and civilisation.

He described in some detail work being done by mission institutions, mentioning particularly the Shantung Christian University at Tsinanfu where a hundred Chinese students, representing 15 of the provinces of the country, are receiving training as thorough as is offered in many medical schools of western lands.

Doctor Moorshead emphasised that he had found that British medical institutions needed men and equipment. In two-thirds of them, he said, there is a serious need for doctors, one-fourth were closed lacking staffs and equipment, one half were in need of nurses and a third needed additional buildings.

He said the present needs probably were due to financial conditions and he expressed the belief that unless new sources from which to obtain funds were found probably the situation could not be remedied. In closing he suggested that some action should be taken by British people resident in China.

THANKS SHANGHAI

Doctor Main told his audience that he had always found Shanghai ready to extend a helping hand when the need arose and he told of the work in Hangchow.

It was he who offered the resolution, later adopted by the meeting, which is designed to meet the present situation. In this resolution it is urged that steps be taken to obtain the practical assistance of Britons residing in China.

Doctor Davenport made some reference to his 30 years of work in China and spoke of the practical value of medical mission work which he said was a great force in fighting ignorance and superstition and of opening the country to intercourse with the people of other lands. Declaring that he felt himself to be an advertiser, he said the work of missionaries promoted the interests of commerce. He said he believed that British merchants here lost by failing to keep in closer touch with the work of medical missions.

Peking Becomes An Armed Camp As Efforts Are Made To Check Student Movement

plans to curb the movement were made.

It is also reported that the Government has ordered the arrest of all student leaders and will place their homes under surveillance. More trouble is certain if the students try to hold their mass meeting regardless of the presence of troops.

Peking Government To Close All The Schools

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, February 5.—The military and police this afternoon dispersed the students who were demonstrating against direct negotiation with Japan on the Shantung question. Upwards of 20 students were wounded.

The Government is appointing a military section in Peking to deal with further demonstrations under a modified form of martial law. It is understood that the Government is also closing all schools.

Faculty Of Nankai Quits In Sympathy With Student Move

Tientsin, February 4.—Says The Peking and Tientsin Times of today: As a result of a special meeting held the day before yesterday, the members of Nankai faculty, as a body, tendered their resignation, protesting against the unlawful and inhumane suppression of the patriotic demonstration and work of the people. Their declaration appeared in the Chinese newspapers yesterday, in which they set forth the reasons for their resignation. They stated that the local officials had taken the laws into their own hands and resorted to brutal means to crush the patriotic spirit of the students and citizens in mercilessly beating students, arresting leaders, and sealing up offices of the Student's Union and People's Union, thus making it impossible for them to carry out their educational program any longer. Hence, they were forced to resign. They shall from now on stay in the school to organise and work out a program to back up the government in both internal and diplomatic affairs.

So far, the Nankai Faculty is the first to openly show sympathy with the patriotic cause. It is the hope of the Nankai teachers that the teachers of the other schools will follow their example, and a strong teacher's union will be soon formed.

Students Story Of Thursday's Incident

With reference to the unfortunate collision outside the Civil Governor's Yamen in the City on Thursday, we have received from a quarter entitled to the highest respect, a few facts, related by one of the student leaders, which put a somewhat different complexion upon the conduct of the students. It would seem that the students had been given to understand, on some date prior to the demonstration, that the representations they desired to make would be accepted by the Civil Governor. When the procession reached the Yamen on Thursday they found the gates closed and no one on duty outside. Some of the students therefore knocked at the gates, and, as a result, four officials and two soldiers came out from behind and informed the students that the Governor was ill. The students, apparently skeptical of this statement, repeated their request to see the Governor. The officials returned to the Yamen, and subsequently reappeared and informed the students that they had telephoned to the Governor. After waiting a while, the students again knocked at the gates and demanded admission. A soldier then appeared and said that the Governor would arrive in about ten minutes. This assertion was repeated two or three times. Ultimately a soldier told the students that four representatives might come in if they would crawl underneath the big gate. The four representatives, two female and two male students, complied and a students peering through the gate observed them go into the room of the Fu Kwan (the Vice-Governor), who, we understand, is the son of General Yang I-teh.'

Chinese Troops Defy Provisions Of Treaty

The Fu Kwan assaulted a girl student named Kuo, striking her on the face, and abused her. Her colleagues remonstrated with the Fu Kwan, and then soldiers came and shut them up in a room. The students waited outside for half-an-hour, and then the soldiers appeared on the scene, with consequences with which our readers are familiar.

It is stated that a considerable number of Chinese troops have taken up quarters in the city, in defiance of Treaty terms. On February 1 at 11 p.m. a Company of Infantry (about 120), despatched from Paotingfu, arrived in Tientsin under a battalion commander named Sung and were billeted in the headquarters of the People's Union and the Students' Union in the Chamber of Commerce. Another detachment, composed of one battalion and two Companies of Infantry reached Tientsin at 4 a.m. on Monday and were stationed in the Law College at Yi Hsing-fu, north of Hopei. A third detachment of two Companies of infantry arrived later from Han Chia-shu, and were quartered at the private residence of the Civil Governor at Hopei.

Exchange Conference Held In London Seeks Remedy For Europe's Chaotic State

Many Overseas Countries Cancelling American Orders And City Financier Suggests Feasibility Of Trading With Germany And Austria

(Reuter's Service)

London, February 3.—The conference on the subject of the international exchanges between the Chancellor of Exchequer and a number of leading politicians including Labor representatives, bankers and financial experts was held at the Treasury this afternoon.

The discussions were secret but it is understood that preliminary arrangements were made to prepare a report to present to the Cabinet.

Meanwhile the American exchange has reached a new low record namely $3.47¼ to the pound sterling and a decree has been issued in Belgium prohibiting speculation in the foreign exchanges under severe penalties.

The view is growing in the United States that the appreciated dollar is the country's greatest economic enemy because it is closing the markets of the world against America. At present many European countries are cancelling their American orders.

The city financier states that the corollary to the admitted remedies, namely, produce more and export more, is that we must buy largely from the countries where exchange is most favorable, namely, Germany and Austria, and national propaganda in this connection is suggested.

Various Proposals Made To Be Laid Before Cabinet

London, February 3, Later.—An official statement with reference to this afternoon's conference on the exchange question says that the deputation of financial experts, etc., stated that the question raised had no particular reference to the exchange situation at present ruling, but that it was the outcome of a series of conferences held in Amsterdam months ago with a view to finding remedies for the economic collapse in many parts of Europe.

The deputation explained its views and laid special stress on the point that the first condition of granting further assistance through public or private channels must be that the expenditure of the various European Governments should be brought within the compass of receipts from taxation and other regular income. Private credits would immediately become available, once this was secured.

It is understood that the various proposals made in connection with the exchange problem will be considered by the Cabinet tomorrow.

at about thirty dollars per mow, which is a sixth of an acre. A Chinese of English university education told me that these farmers were afraid not to sell, being intimidated by the arrogance of the Japanese, with their soldiers so close at hand.

No vast number of Japanese soldiers are in Shantung; there is no need of them now, whatever the plans of the empire may be. The actual number is not known. The Japanese claim there are but 2,000, mostly necessary as railway guards and for policing in Tsingtao. They say there are but 600 in Tsingtao and 250 in Tsinanfu, and that the rest are scattered along the railway line, with the largest encampment at Fangtze. Conservative men at Tsingtao and at Tsinanfu told me that undoubtedly there were many more than the 2,000 of the official claim in Shantung, and generally they placed the probable number at about 10,000. Certainly it appeared to me that there were many more than 600 of them at Tsingtao, for one saw them on the streets everywhere, and everywhere back on the German built roads over the granite hills of the leased territory. And in half a dozen of the spacious barracks built by the Germans Japanese soldiers in considerable number were quartered.

The Japanese have not repaired the concrete fortifications of Tsingtao, the semi-circle of them back in the granite hills which were the main reliance of the Germans for the defense of the port. Those concrete strongholds themselves were but little damaged by the Japanese shells. I saw most of them and did not find one whose massive walls or roof had been pierced or shattered by the enemy fire. Guns placed on their roofs and protected only by steel shelters were mostly destroyed, but there was no smashing of forts such as occured at Liege.

So though the Japanese might easily make Tsingtao a fortified port they have not done so. Why should they, for the present?

"The number of men in the army, throughout Japan, down with the flu now has reached the total of 5,512, the number of deaths being 896."

Basketball

The Yellow Sox defeated the U.S.S. Quiros, Wednesday night, in a close game, the final score being 34-16.

The Navy men had not been able to do much practicing, and were unable to shoot. The scoring for the Quiros was done principally by Salamonowitz, who shot two field goals and made six goals from fouls. Tom Chang and M. C. Liu starred for the Yellow Sox.

The American Song Service (B) team defeated the American school by 24 points, the final score standing 58-24.

The first half was very close, until Glauque warmed up, and then the Song Service began to steadily walk away. Snooke was knocked out and play was not resumed for an hour or more. Glauque, White and Haskell were the stars of the match.

This makes the School's third lose.

The Student Crisis In Peking

OUR telegrams of yesterday and today disclose a new and serious crisis in Peking, the outcome of which cannot easily be foreseen. While the students were parading and lecturing in order to impress the government with the earnestness of their opposition to any negotiations with Japan over Shantung, a motor car in which General Ma Lung-piao, Inspector General of Police, was riding, attempted to cross the procession. General Ma is none too popular with the students and in the melee which ensued his car suffered damage although Ma himself was unhurt. The Peking garrison and police then turned out and rounded up and imprisoned the students. Later all but forty of the demonstrators were released. The forty who were held admitted responsibility in order to bring about the release of their comrades. Those released, joined by others, lost no time in resuming their demonstrations.

Later despatches show that the Peking Government is taking stronger steps to check the movement. Groups are being dispersed, the lecturers suppressed and in some instances beaten, their banners torn up. A meeting of the student bodies at the Government University has been called off because of the Ministry of Education's threat to break it up with 500 soldiers. Military camps are being established in various parts of the capital. Pressure also is being put upon the merchants who are supporting the students.

Now come reports that the government is adopting these drastically repressive and coercive measures at the behest of the Japanese. This may or may not be true. What is certain is that it will be believed by the students not only in Peking but all over the country. What is still more certain is that the Peking Government cannot stop the student movement in this or any other way. The student movement is one that any sane and modern government would treat with sympathy. Properly led and directed it can result only in good for China. The Peking method is not the right one.

And while many will be disposed to blame the students for losing their tempers when Gen. Ma's car came crowding into their ranks, others will detect in his action a scheme to provoke the attack and give him a chance to turn out his police and break up the demonstration.

We have never before heard of General Ma being in such a hurry.

Students throughout the country will resent his action and probably indulge in sympathetic demonstrations. That all the military and police force of Peking should be brought to bear on these students merely because Gen. Ma's car was slightly damaged when it plunged into their ranks requires some further explanation.

The Peking Government has not strengthened itself with the general body of public opinion in China by its present course.

Books By Heywood Broun

One of the secrets of the amazing success of the Catholic army chaplains in France was the breadth of the sympathy of these men. No one was outside the pale of their interest and attention. We find, for instance, in "Father Duffy's Story" (Doran) an entire paragraph devoted to a dramatic critic.

"In this sector," writes Father Duffy in describing one of the most hotly contested points in the line, "we had a visit from Sergeant Alexander Woollcott, who is well known in New York as a dramatic critic, and who has been assigned by G. H. Q. to the duty of reporter for The Stars and Stripes. He is always on hand when there is trouble, and the field of war becomes a pleasant place for me whenever he is there. We have swapped stories and discussed men and books in the weirdest places. He is communicative rather than inquisitive, and one never thinks of him as a reporter, but he gets all the information he wants and all the more effectively because there is no appearance of seeking it."

Sergeant Woollcott is himself the author of a book called "The Command Is Forward," and, although we cannot remember at the present moment, we suppose that, as the custom goes, there is a friendly paragraph some place or other in his book for Father Duffy.

Books which amuse are welcome, but we like better those volumes from which one may derive instruction. Such a book which has just come to hand is called "The A B C of Etiquette," published by G. F. Haruden, of Brighton, England. In it are such useful hints as "The menu card should be glanced at: not critically examined," and "Second helpings of soup and fish are usually declined." Of course, the latter is a little indefinite. For our part we should prefer to know under what circumstances they may be accepted.

However, in spite of its wealth of detail about social custom, the book indicates that there are moments when the most unconventional conduct is permissible. Thus we find, "Gentlemen talk to one another without introduction after the ladies have left the dinner table."

Recently we expressed the opinion that of all the characters in modern fiction we thought Lena Lingard, of Willa Sibert Cather's "My Antonia," would be the most stimulating person to take to the theater, because, according to the hero of the book. "I used to watch a play with Lena. Everything was wonderful to her, and everything was true. It was like going to a revival meeting with some one who was always being converted."

Houghton Mifflin, the publishers of "My Antonia," have looked into the matter more closely and offer some other observations on the theatrical conduct of Miss Lingard which do not seem so enticing.

"When the young man of the story took Lena to the theater," writes the publishers, "he left her, after the second act, 'in tearful contemplation of the ceiling,' and went out into the lobby to smoke. Through the next scene Lena wept unceasingly.' When the play closed his breast pocket handkerchief, 'worn for elegance and not at all for use, was wet through.' Must it be concluded that you are most easily captured by the liquid type of lady?"

No, we are willing to retract. Lena would not do for a theatrical steady. We should hardly dare to take her to see Jane Cowl.

In fact, on second thought, we would rather take Little Eva. She, of course, would have to be home early, and one could get away at the end of the second act.

"Please make a New Year's resolution," writes Maunelo, "that you will not apologise so much in your column during 1920. It spoils the effect of your writing."

We don't know that we can do that, for we are always fearful of being caught on top of a dogma. The book which we think very good indeed may not be half as fine as it seems to us. We can't resist the temptation of saying in the first flight of enthusiasm: "Anybody who doesn't like 'Miss Roe,' by Jane Doe, has wasted his time in learning his letters." Two weeks after we are in a perfect panic for fear that we have unjustly hurt the feelings of some worthy reader, and so we feel constrained to add that maybe we have overestimated "Miss Roe" and that people who don't like it need not despair.

Nevertheless and notwithstanding, we are still of the opinion that Willa Sibert Cather's "My Antonia" is among the best of recent American novels and that it deserves the attention of every discriminating reader.

Oliver Herford, in his new style book of geography called "The Giddy Globe," speculates on what might have happened if "concealed in the cargo of Hypothetic Nebulæ destined for the construction of the Terrestrial Globe was a Protoplasmic Stowaway that sprang to being in the shape of a Critic, just as the work of Creation was finished."

"We may be sure," continues Mr. Herford, "that he would have found many things not to his liking; technical defects, such as the treatment of grass and foliage in green instead of the proper purple; the tinting of the sky, which any landscape painter will tell you would be more decorative done in turquoise green than cobalt blue.

"Like the foolish Butterfly in the Talmud, who (to impress Mrs. Butterfly) stamped his tiny foot upon the dome of King Solomon's Temple, our Critic might have declared the World 'too flimsy in construction.' He would certainly have found fault with the Solar System and the Plumbing—the absence of heat in winter, when there is the greater need of it, and the paucity of moisture in the desert places where it never rains.

"The comicality of the Ape family might have provoked a reluctant smile, but much more likely a lecture on the impropriety of descending to caricature in a serious work.

"At best our Critic would have pronounced the freshly made World the work of a beginner, conceding, perhaps, that he 'showed promise' and 'might go far,' and if he wished to be very impressive indeed, he would pretend that he had penetrated the veil of Anonymity and hint darkly that he detected evident traces of a Feminine Touch!"

Theology On The Beat

(Ministers in Scotland are said to be quitting the pulpit and joining the police force on account of better pay received.)

In Scotland, where the bagpipes skirl,
And Lauder practises his burr,
'Tis risky now to take a whirl
At calling coppers aught but "Sir;"

No mercy need you hope to win,
No whit avails each frantic plea
Since there's been mixed, for those who sin,
Policing and theology.

If, on some alcoholic burst,
You run afoul of limb of law,
A battered head is not the worst
Of all the troubles that you draw,

While waiting for the jailward trip
The officer says, "Firstly, friend,"
And, having you upon the hip,
He preaches to you without end.

There's only one hope to it all
That can be glimpsed from this far shore:
When in the stately justice hall
You and the cop thresh matters o'er,

The justice may dissolve in tears
And cry: "What ho! loose each handcuff;
With such long preachments in his ears
This man's had punishment enough."

ARTHUR CHAPMAN.

The Hours In A Year

In the office of the Cosmopolitan Magazine the editorial staff prints once a week a publication called "The Better Way," which is devoted to the interests of the office and the promotion of efficiency in the daily work.

The last number for 1919 was a sort of combination Christmas and New Year issue, and on the first page, following a bit of poetry, was an editorial headed "Looking Ahead."

Out of that editorial we have clipped a number of paragraphs and are reprinting them here. They inspire and help workers on the Cosmopolitan and they will help many others.

Here is what the editor says:

Nineteen twenty will contain fifty-eight hundred and fifty-six waking hours.

It won't make so much difference to you what you do with your days, your weeks or your months if you live up to the possibilities that each of these hours offers.

Certainly you are entitled to ask yourself these questions and surely you deserve a frank answer to each of them—an answer that only you yourself can give.

Are you planning to achieve happiness as a result of the expenditure of these five thousand eight hundred and fifty-six hours? And have you decided in your own mind what will make you happiest?

Perhaps you'll find your greatest happiness in doing something for others. How many of your hours will be spent to this end?

How much progress do you plan to make in your business?

Shall you read any really great books? You might note down a few that you haven't read and which you should read.

Are you planning a few hours in which to keep yourself in shape physically?

Above all things, don't plan what not to do. Your short-comings may be positive, but if you make your virtues more positive and resolve to do beneficial things, instead of resolving to refrain from the others, it may well happen that you won't have time for the others!

There's plenty of good advice—more than many will accept and put into effect. But he who cannot apply all of it may take any one of the suggestions and determine that he will bear it in mind every day this year.

'Venus And Adonis'

(New York Times)

The fact that a copy of "Venus and Adonis" lately sold for $75,000 has been whimsically taken to signify that the poem has at last become a "best seller." The truth is that it was a best seller when first published, in 1593, and not only in the matter of bookshop sales but also in the nature of its appeal to the public. If Elizabethan London had endured a censorship as exultantly puritanical as that of New York today, it would probably have been suppressed. The first of Shakespeare's works to be printed, no less than six editions are known to have been issued in the following decade. By 1636 twelve editions had appeared. Of these, only two are extant in more than three copies. Several are extant in only a single copy, as is the case with Mr. Huntington's recent purchase, the so-called fourth edition of 1599. In all likelihood many other editions were published, of which no trace remains.

This abundance of editions and rarity of extant copies Sir Sidney Lee calls "the strangest fact to be noted with regard to the bibliography" of the poem. In "Shakespeare and His Fellows" Dr. D. H. Madden suggests the explanation. "The eagerness with which they [successive editions] were devored appears from the fact that so few copies have survived the wear and tear of admiring generations." Further elucidation is supplied by the "Parnassus" comedies, which were performed by the students of St. John's College, Cambridge, between 1597 and 1601, and which pointedly satirise current events in the world of letters. One of the characters, the pretentious but vulgar-minded Gullio, scorns the acknowledged classics, but raves over the young Shakespeare's poem. "Let this duncified world esteem of Spencer and Chaucer, I'll worship sweet Mr. Shakespeare, and to honor him will lay his 'Venus and Adonis' under my pillow." Shakespeare's subsequent fame has somewhat dulled the edge of the satire, at least for the casual ear, but a careful reading of these old plays makes the meaning obvious. "Venus and Adonis" was the delight of the common herd. The author of the "Parnassus" comedies, however, had genuine literary acumen, divining the exquisite tenderness and beauty, the true Shakespearean touch, in many parts of the poem:

Who loves not Adons love or Lucrece rape?
His sweeter verse contains hart throbbing line.
Could but a graver subject him content,
Without loves foolish lazy languishment!

In brief, one gathers that "Venus and Adonis," together with "The Rape of Lucrece," which followed speedily in 1594, established Shakespeare as the delight of that crudely amative public to which our modern best-sellers appeal.

This is, however, only one side of the picture. Shakespeare himself, and indeed the literary fashion of London, took these popular poems with a seriousness which, from the modern point of view, seems equally strange. For many years after he had risen supreme in comedy, and scaled the loftiest heights of tragedy, the poems continued to be his chief claim to literary fame, not only in the judgment of others, but apparently in his own judgment. The gay and brilliant young Earl of Southampton stood as their patron, introducing their humble and country-bred author to court circles. In 1593 Shakespeare had already written at least four plays, including "The Comedy of Errors" and "Romeo and Juliet;" yet in the dedicatory letter to Southampton he styles "Venus and Adonis" the "first heir of my invention." This has often been taken to mean that it was written some years before it was published; but it more probably indicates a deep scorn of the theater which led him to ignore the plays. Several of the sonnets voice this feeling, chiding the fortune

That did not better for my life provide
Than public means, which public manners breeds:
Thence comes it that my name receives a brand;
And almost thence my nature is subdued.

Throughout his life he did not publish any of his plays, and his will made no provision for their preservation. These two early poems, written when he was just under 30, are in all probability the only texts which he ever saw through the press.

"Venus and Adonis" deserves both the scorn and the praise it evoked. Making all allowances for Elizabethan outspokenness and Elizabethan paganism, some parts of it might best have been thumbed into oblivion by prentices and stable boys. Shakespeare had yet to realise fully those depths in his nature which were so soon to make him the most sensitively noble of poets as well as the most vigorous and impassioned. Yet the lucent glory of his style is evident throughout, and also his frank and richly colored delight in nature and mankind. The description of the hunting of the hare has often been admired. The following lines, spoken by the lovelorn, vainly pleading Venus, have the witchery of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," which was written in 1594 or 1595 and was already no doubt taking form in Shakespeare's mind:

Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear,
Or like a fairy trip upon the green,
Or like a nymph with long disheveled hair
Dance on the sands, and yet no footing seen.
Love is a spirit, all compact of fire.
Not gross to sink, but light, and will aspire.

Rise Of Soviet Press In Russia

Russians must have taken heart from the example of their one time ally, Belgium, in the matter of printing and issuing a daily paper. The journalistic stunt of La Libre Belgique issued daily under the nose of the fuming German, was in some features copied in Russia during the early days of the Bolshevik ascendency. But finally the press went down after spasmodic efforts at maintaining life, until now it has sunk into a mere Soviet propaganda. "Nothing which does not contribute to this one end has in Russia today any justification for its existence," says Alfred Streisler in the Kolnische Zeitung. There is today no press in Russia in the exact sense of the word, he declares, "since there is no single journal of which it can now be said that either in material or idea it rests upon popular foundation and that it is read by the people." He first goes into a little recent history:

"At the beginning of the Bolshevik revolution the attitude of the new Soviet rule, with respect to the press, was not so outright. All journals were at first commanded to print the edicts of the de facto government, in which attitude one can discern a certain recognition of the press. But very soon things were changed. The preventive censorship which was introduced was strongly enforced. There were time limitations in the suspension of periodicals, and punishment became the order of the day. The government felt the mighty growth of the opposition to the new regime and rightly feared that exponent of public feeling—the press. One journal after another was now completely forbidden. No longer was limitation one of time. Editors and contributors were imprisoned. Printing offices were plundered, materials were destroyed, but even all this did not seem to help. The wretched thing refused to die. The forbidden journals appeared under new titles, but the policy and the political direction remained the same. Only the title was altered, but in such a way that every purchaser knew without further inquiry which paper he had before him. If the new newspaper was again forbidden, then, once more, the title was changed. For example, the Utro Rossiji, after its first prohibition, became the Sarji Rossiji, and when this was once more prohibited it came out under the title Ranneje Utro. Consequently, severer measures were used. The arrest and punishment of proprietors and editors grew more frequent. Printing offices were confiscated (of course, after they had been plundered and demolished, for that was what was meant in Russia by 'socialising' them). The proprietors and editorial staff were prohibited, under threat of the sharpest punishment, to call into existence a new publication, or to have any part in such. And so, after a long fight to the death, in May, 1918, practically all journals which had existed up to that time went by the board. Sometime in June or July of 1918, the last free newspapers of Russia had sunk into the grave, and the Russian press had ceased to exist.

"The process had been somewhat prolonged. Immediately after the revolution they had tried to get rid of the press in a somewhat refined manner—by forbidding the newspapers to receive advertisements. But this sly means failed. The journals appeared even without advertisements. They had then, after a long time, taken the position of a business-like effort to confine themselves to the operation of publicity. For still it was the hope of those who had preserved their reason throughout the general anarchy with the help of the press to bring about eventual betterment as the crisis came ever sharper. But the Bolshevik bayonets directed against the lazy people, who did not understand and for the most part had no share in public affairs, proved stronger than the processes of reasoning with a population that has willingly bowed itself as slaves to Lenin, as it had earlier bowed its back in slavery to the Tsar."

"The press is dead, long live the press—the Soviet press!" cries this German writer with accompanying sentiments that from such a source have the charm of novelty. "I am compelled to say that for those to whom the press is more than a printed paper, for whom it is a means of the expression of opinion, a public organ, of such a press in present day Russia not an iota exists." But—

"The journals there are today in Russia, that is, the Soviet journals, would better be called pamphlets, a designation that is justified as much by the contents as by the means of circulation. Under the protection of the government, journals are issued from different Bolshevistic organisations. One such publication has had the heading, 'The Edicts of a Soviet Government;' a large edition of this paper is issued each day; there follows a leading article, which either deals with some movement which is anti-revolutionary or has to do with the "imminent' Bolshevistic world-revolution. After that there appear reports concerning Bolshevistic efforts in foreign lands.

"Yet wait. There is yet room for criticism of the all-powerful government. The most important Russian Soviet publication, the Iswjestija (the full name of the periodical is 'News of the Soviet of the Committee of Workers and Soldiers'), which is the intimate organ of the Soviet government, has had for some time the heading, 'Little Need of the Mechanical Side of Things.' One may well say 'little need.' For instance, a Bolshevik bewails the fact that although he is a member of the party, he has been compelled to wait too long for something or other by some officer. Another one will say—in uncouth expression—that it's not at all a very pretty thing that the waterworks do not function, and that the temperature in his dwelling has not been above zero all winter.

"Yet we must do even such a journal as this the justice to admit that once a week it has a pretty spirited supplement, which contains little essays in a Bolshevik tone, written by active literary adherents of the party. Besides this, the periodicals have given the part devoted to advertisements to the announcements of the Soviet officials, advertisements concerning lost or stolen personal articles, and merchants' ads.

"The sale of the Soviet journals is accomplished partly through news dealers on the streets. But by such means only a very small part of the circulation is reached. All the Soviet officials and all the socialist bodies receive each day from the propaganda department of the Soviet committees a mountain of newspapers for propaganda purposes. The price of the journals which appear today is, in comparison with that of usual Russian issues, entirely out of proportion. A number of the Iswjestija, consisting of four pages, including about half a page of regulations and a full page of advertisements, costs in Moscow 60 kopecks, and outside of Moscow 1 ruble and 20 kopecks.

"In general, the new Soviet press is even now in a difficult position. It has before it exceedingly great dangers, for there is hardly any paper at all in Russia, and on that account many journals have been consolidated. The future prospect seems to be that the entire Russian Soviet press will be unified into a single government organ."

The Question Of Whom

When Will Grammarians Catch Up With Language?

By Frank H. Vizetelly

The simplicity of our relatives is due to the fact that they, with one exception, have no gender, person, number or case, and thus are seldom misused. Who alone, having a nominative, possessive and objective case, retains some of the much bewailed lost inflections, but how long will these be retained? In the past confusion has invariably led to the adoption of the simpler forms, and who shall say that whom may not go by the board in time?

There is nothing new in claiming that a violation of the canons of the language is poor English. That is the common practice of grammarians. I echo Mr. Ferguson's hope that some day perhaps the grammarians will catch up with the language and give up their longing to recast it and run it into what the late Dr. Fernald called "tradition molds from which it should come forth with cogs and cams and dovetails to be interlocked with mathematical precision." This eminent grammarian, who long ago recognised the loose way in which who and whom were used, said: "There is just one of the relative or interrogative pronouns that has a semblance of declension, and we are at our wits' end how to handle it. We are appalled at a word that riots in the luxury of a nominative, possessive and objective case—who, whose, whom. . . . It must be admitted that a somewhat advanced knowledge of English grammar is required for the correct use of who and whom in certain special constructions."

To me English grammar is merely a systematised statement of facts based upon approved English usage. These facts establish the controlling principle, and the language reserves to itself the right to sacrifice the niceties of syntax for euphony and strength. We need correct English, of course; but not that correctness which is so deadly that it takes a vigorous blunder to relieve the dullness. In using the language, one should bear in mind that the correctness of a form or of a construction is not impaired by the fact that nothing analogous to it exists in the language, any more than that the correctness of a word is to be challenged because there is no other in the language that resembles it in sound or spelling. All the rules of grammar and rhetoric should be based on good usage, for that is the only standard by which the correct use of words is to be judged.

We have learned from the past that the changes in our language are a part of its life, and from the present we may learn that the error of today may become the established idiom of tomorrow. Once again I hear the old rule: "Never end a sentence with a preposition," and the absurdity of it strikes me forcibly when I recall the noble words that Lowell applied to his native land and to President Garfield—"The soil out of which such men as he are made is good to be born on, good to live on, good to die for, and good to be buried in."

"In his "Expressive English," Dr. Fernald tells us that Father Taylor, of the Seaman's Bethel, of Boston, while addressing an audience, became involved in a sentence which he could not complete. He paused a moment, then exclaimed: "Brethren, I've lost the track of the nominative case, but one thing I know—I'm bound for the kingdom of heaven!"

Sure

Mr. Bushe—She has a very difficult part in the new play.

Mrs. Busche—Difficult? Why, she doesn't say a word!

"Well, isn't that difficult for a woman?"

"One leads where many follow."

Hall's Distemper has led the way to a new era in house decoration—the era of brighter, cleaner and healthier homes.

It is the most durable of all decorations, lasting for years with freshness unimpaired, whereas wall-papers deteriorate from the first day by fading and accumulating dust and dirt.

Hall's Distemper is a thorough disinfectant, and is applied directly upon the wall, forming a hard surface, from which dust and dirt may be "spring-cleaned" by lightly sponging with warm water.

Hall's Distemper (Registered Trade Mark) is a unique preparation and has the recommendation of leading sanitary authorities, architects, and decorators everywhere.

Yourself And Others

By Dr. Wm. A. McKeever
(Professor in the University of Kansas and an authority on Child Training)

My Dear Youthful Friend—What is your thing of rarest beauty, the finest piece of natural or creative art that might be placed before your attention? Is it a choice painting? Well, suppose some one, while you stand admiring, should mar its beauty with a blotch of ink. Is it a classic musical creation? Suppose its harmonies were abruptly shattered by the loud thumping of a jazz band. Is it a gorgeous mountain scene, beheld from your window? Suppose its view were blurred or suddenly obscured by the erection of an ugly building. Would not your very soul cry out against this disturbance of its ecstacy?

Well, my Young Friend, you are my thing of rarest beauty. I see embodied deep within your nature all the fineness of the painter's art, all the rhapsodies of the musical symphony, all the magical tracings of the mountain landscape. But when you smirch your character with dissipation I chide you; when you fail to make use of your hidden genius I want to rebuke you; and when you throw away your opportunity to become a superb personality, I feel like shouting my disapproval.

Why do you disappoint? Why do you fail to appreciate your own inherent beauty? Why do you not understand that Heaven fashioned you out of a piece of divinity and go courageously forward to the slow achievement of that superb destiny for which you were thus consecrated? Why have anything to do with meanness or selfishness? Why waste your precious time and talents in dissipation? Why debauch your powerful brain with drink or drugs? Why content yourself with being a pigmy when you are potentially a giant."

Whether you are a carpenter or a cartoonist, a plumber or a pianist, a bricklayer or a banker—I have tried on other occasions to tell you how to realise the fineness in your nature. I have urged you to strive to be superb among your class and kind.

To study hard; to work diligently, to read good books; to advance by inches; to quickly arise if you fall; to pray fervently for divine guidance; to seek advice from the wisest in your profession; to learn to be content with little until you get more; to find the hidden beauty beneath the ugly surface of things; to learn to praise and admire every struggling comrade about you; to love little children and tenderly regard every mother; to give praise for your greatest earthly blessing, good health; to thank God for the light which he continues to shed upon your path—

Thus you may keep unsullied the charm in your life. Wherefore, my youthful friend, quit robbing the owner of its beauty, which is you in process of a normal and happy unfoldment.

SOME PEOPLE RUSH ABOUT and tire themselves unnecessarily, thinking to cure their constipation by spasmodic fits of overexertion. Others more sensible, take reasonable exercise daily, and use the little gentle-as-nature laxatives, Pinkettes, occasionally, thus ensuring healthy regularity. By dispelling constipation Pinkettes cure Biliousness, Sick Headaches, Liverishness, foul breath. Of druggists, or post free, 60 cents the vial, from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai.

The Mid-Winter Wardrobe

BY RITA STUYVESANT

At this season of the year when one's Winter clothes are beginning to look shabby and it is yet too early to appear in one's new Spring attire, it is a good time to look over the wardrobe and freshen up a bit. Whether it is one's Winter coat, suit tricotine frock purchased in the Fall, or perhaps that little afternoon frock that needs a new note, now is the time to begin.

Of course a thorough cleaning and pressing will often do wonders with one's suit or coat and perhaps it is only a new blouse that is needed to freshen it up a little. Georgette blouses of suit shades are well liked but if you have been wearing one for the past few months, select something light, or perhaps a gayly figured blouse.

Slip on over blouses of hip-length still promise to be popular despite the long time they have been worn. A blouse of taupe gray worn over a camisole of turquoise blue is most effective, and if one adds a bit of hand embroidery in blue wool, the result is truly charming.

Figured blouses are also lovely worn over plain colored camisoles and girdled with silk or metal cord. One can choose either a slip-over model or the caught-in puffed-over Balkan effect. The latter is more becoming to the very slim girl.

This is a good time to buy fur pieces, and very often one can purchase short lengths left from earlier in the season. A new fur collar and cuffs will add considerably to your suit. Squirrel, nutria, opossum and seal are smart for a heavy suit.

But if it is your tricotine or serge frock that you have wearied of and desire to change a little, you can make a new top of satin or figured silk, leaving a panel of the material both front and back. New sleeves, too, are an improvement and often can replace worn ones. Another smart way to freshen your serge frock is to cut the sleeves off to elbow length and finish them with turnback cuffs of pretty pastel satin. A rolled monk's collar of the same material finishes the oval neck. For this one might choose gold, rose, French blue, green or henna colored satin or faille silk.

Perhaps it is your underwear that needs mending. For the silk underskirt, one can buy a dust ruffle all ready to sew on. Or you can re-tint your crepe de chine finery if it has it lost its fresh coloring. New beading and ribbon will often renew the appearance and lengthen the wear of the garment.

Hats, too, will often be improved by a good brushing. A bit of new trimming of an entirely different style will completely change the appearance of an old hat.

Headgear Of Cardinals

A cardinal has numerous hats. First there is his ordinary everyday hat—the black wide-brimmed one that most clerics wear. Secondly, there is a red hat bordered with gold, which he uses when he goes to church in his red cassock. At one time this was the cardinal's everyday hat. Then there is another peculiar hat—very large with a small crown of red silk bordered with gold. This is called the capellone, and at one time it protected the cardinal's head as he walked abroad in the sun, and an attendant held it over him. In these days, however, it is used only upon extraordinary occasions, such as canonisations. The dean of the household, to whose care it is entrusted, holds it suspended from his left arm.

Another hat is the biretta. It has different coverings for the seasons; in Summer it is covered with light silk, in Winter with heavy cloth. Both silk and cloth are red. There are other birettas for other ranks in the clergy. That of the cardinal is to be distinguished by the fact that at the meeting place of the horns there is a loop of silk string instead of the usual pompon. The particular biretta which the Pope bestows on the cardinal is never worn.

Next in the list comes the red skull-cap, sometimes called the calotte and sometimes the zuchet-ta. All priests may wear a skullcap, but only a cardinal may wear a red one.

Lastly, there is the pontifical hat, which is never worn, not even at the moment when the prelate becomes a cardinal. The Pontiff merely holds it above the new cardinal's head as he confers the office. This hat, the real symbol of the cardinal's dignity, is of red cloth lined with silk. Two cords hang from it, and end in fifteen tassels arranged in five rows. The cords are of red silk entwined with gold. Other ecclesiastical hats have the cords, but only the cardinal's are red. The cords for bishops and archbishops are green, those for patriarchs are green entwined with gold, and those of most prelates are black. Then, too, only the cardinal's cords have fifteen tassels.

It is a tradition that the red hat of the cardinal is due to the following circumstance: The Countess of Flanders complained to Innocent the Fourth that in a great assemblage she could not distinguish cardinals from abbots and other great personages of the church. Accordingly, at the Council of Lyons in 1245 the Pope prescribed that the red hat should replace the mitre; and ever since that time the symbol of the cardinal's rank has been a red hat. Since the year 1464 red robes have been worn by cardinals; the purple robes, which were decreed by Boniface the Eighth, are worn only in Lent and Advent.

The Bodleian Library

Sir Thomas Bodley himself drew up the "statutes" for the famous library founded by him, and opened in 1608, and his orders were that "the keeper shall open and close the library doors at certain hours, varying with the season and that at these prescribed hours he shall cause to be rung the warning bell of his ingress and egress, that men may shun the discommodities of repairing thither oversoon, or abiding there too long."

The keeper was to see that a register of gifts should be kept, "written with a special, fair and pleasing hand, and withal to be exposed where it may be still in sight, for every man to view, as an eminent and endless token of our thankful acceptation of whatsoever hath been given, and as an excellent inducement for posterity to imitate these former good examples."

The founder ruled that before any graduate or any person of note would be given the privilege of the Bodleian Library he should appear before the Vice-Chancellor or his substitute, and there in the presence of the library keeper he should take the oath of fidelity to the library, by which he promised that he would "conform himself with modesty and silence and use both the books and everything appertaining to their furniture with a careful respect to their longest conservation."

King James the First was so appreciative of the work of Bodley that he granted letters patent the year after the library was opened naming the library after the founder, whom he later knighted and whose name, said he, should have been not Bodley, but Godley. The Bodleian Library, despoiled of its contents in the reign of Edward the Sixth, stands on the site of the University Library, and has been added to by many magnificent gifts. It now contains more than 250,000 volumes and 20,000 manuscripts.

Chinese Christian Intelligencer Has Highly Successful Year

The Board of Directors of The Chinese Christian Intelligencer held its annual meeting on Feb. 4th at the residence of Dr. S. I. Woodbridge the English editor. There were present; Messrs. V. Z. Kao, manager of the Commercial Press; Y. C. Pao superintendent of the printing department of the Commercial Press; Pastor P. C. Chang of Hingsze; Mr. C. S. Cheng, Chinese editor of the Intelligencer; Revs. G. F. Fitch E. C. Lobenstine, J. W. Lowrie, H. M. Smith, D. W. Richardson, Gilbert McIntosh and S. I. Woodbridge.

STARTED 18 YEARS AGO

This paper was Started 18 years ago by the various Presbyterian bodies at work in China and Manchuria. These are the English, Irish and Scotch Presbyterians, with the Established Church of Scotland, the Canadian, Northern and Southern (U.S.A. and U.S.) and Reformed in America.

The Intelligencer has become one of the most widely circulated papers in China. At first its readers were few and ill informed as to the affairs of the world or the church. But now the minds of its constituency have developed so rapidly that the articles now published in its columns will compare favorably with those found in American newspapers.

The paper has about 300 Chinese correspondents in all sections of China and other parts of the world where Chinese live. Its constituency is composed of readers all over China. In some places it is posted up on walls and in many hamlets it is eagerly awaited by people who have no other means of communication with the outside world.

THROUGH TWO WARS

It has passed through the war with Japan and the Revolution of 1911 when Chinese journalism was precarious and even dangerous; was a great factor in securing Religious Toleration in China and has been made the official organ of numerous religious bodies in China.

The paper circulates in nearly all the Provinces of China proper and the Provinces of Manchuria; also among Chinese who live in the United States, Canada, Honolulu, Philippine Islands, New Zealand, Hongkong, Singapore, Burmah, Sumatra and other countries. In some districts the weekly visitor is placed on a board in a prominent position, so that all who wish may read.

During the past eighteen years many thousands of dollars have been sent in for worthy objects by readers of the Intelligencer. Famines in Kangsu, Hunan, Anhwei and other provinces have evoked practical sympathy.

CONTENTS VARIED

Half of the weekly issue is devoted to secular literature, which consists largely of miscellany, useful articles on history, medicine, etc. Serial stories have also appeared and these have been bound and sold. Two of these have reached twelfth editions. Reuter's telegrams and Presidential mandates are an interesting feature of its make up.

The chief object of the paper is to give the Chinese a full knowledge of the way of salvation, building up the Church, and binding together all the Chinese Christians.

The Rev. C. Y. Cheng, D.D., Secretary of the China Continuation Committee and now leader of the China for Christ Movement, says of the paper: "I am glad to testify to the great service which the Intelligencer is rendering to the Christian Church throughout the country. It has an unlimited opportunity to help the Church moving forward. It is rare to find any Christian community where the Intelligencer is not already well known. It has long ago passed the stage of being merely a denominational paper.

FOR CHRISTIAN CHINESE

"It is distinctly a magazine for the whole Christian body. With the universal spread of education, the printed, page is bound to be of ever increasing value. The editors' wide outlook, far seeing vision, long years of experience and thorough understanding of the Christian Church within and without, have enabled them to make this great Christian weekly more indispensable to the followers of Christ in the land of Cathay."

The reports read at this meeting of the Board by the editors showed gratifying results. Hundreds of letters from Chinese in nearly all the Provinces of China are received at the office every year.

These show numerous conversions and continued spiritual uplift as well as general enlightenment of minds hitherto darkened by ignorance and superstition.

The Intelligencer is published by the Presbyterian Mission Press of Shanghai.
